Tagged PDF's

Bushfire information is now available online as a tagged PDF allowing those who are blind or have low vision to access all the essential information thanks to the assistance of a screen reader and other assistive technology.

A Screen reader reads out loud all the text on the screen enabling our reader to access valuable fire safety information at home, to other readers the document looks the same.

Podcasts and Audio books

Many people now prefer to access information via podcasts and in audio formats. CFA has audio version of the following publications along with a series of fire safety messages. A series of Podcasts are also available for listeners.

- You Guide to Survival
- Fire Danger Ratings
- Can I Can't I

Did you know that CFA provides closed captions with their video's? Don't forget to turn the captions on.

Easy English

10 summer bushfire topics have been translated into Easy English. These resources make information accessible to everyone, especially people who have a disability or where English is a second language. Ideally, a support person assists the reader to read, understand and make decisions about the information.

Easy English is a writing style that helps people who find it hard to read and understand English. It has a lower reading level than 'Simple English', using short sentences with an image.

CFA works with other organisations to develop specialised resources for people with intellectual disability or who have autism to understand fire. Social story books are available for Bushfire and Grassfire. Contact community.programs@cfa.vic.gov.au to access.
